I answer that, Besides the natural and the human law it was necessary for the directing of human conduct to have a Divine law. Wherefore it does not lay upon the multitude of imperfect men the burdens of those who and Reason: A Treatise on Legal Argumentation: 97 (Law and Philosophy Library) already virtuous, viz. Accordingly, as to those precepts of the natural law contained in the Old Law, all were bound to observe the Old Law; not because they belonged to the Old Law, but because they belonged to the natural law.
